Professionals Endorse Creating Wills

Sheila K. Smith (left), a financial advisor with Edward Jones in Chiefland, and A. Leigh Cangelosi, an attorney from Bell, are seen in the Edward Jones office in Chiefland on Tuesday night (Oct. 24) after completing the presentation of reasons why everyone needs to create a will. This free program where general information was shared with interested parties about wills, advance directives (living wills) and durable power of attorney documents provided a general overview of some general concepts relating to planning for the unexpected, preparing for retirement and how property may go somewhere other than where a person wants after they die if there is no advance preparation. People who attended the get-together enjoyed free hors d'oeuvres and soft drinks as well. Smith said she may provide this program quarterly to help more people understand why individuals need an estate plan.
