Two City Commissioners Take The Oath Of Office

Chiefland City Commissioner Donald Lawrence (left) and Tim West take the oath of office Monday night (Sept. 10). Levy County Judge Tim Browning administered the oath to the two men. Lawrence was reelected without opposition. West won in a tie-vote election with former City Commissioner Teresa Barron after West selected the long straw, as Florida law prescribes the method for deciding a tie vote in a municipal election when there is no ordinance specifically calling for another election to break the tie.

Mayor Betty Walker made the presentation.

Walker mentioned that during that time, from 2004 through 2018, Barron had served as a city commissioner, vice mayor and mayor.

“It’s been a long 14 years,” Barron said, “but I have enjoyed every bit of it. There are some good people in this community. We love this community. And all of the staff and all of the commissioners are good people.”

Barron added that she is thankful for having the opportunity to serve the people of Chiefland for 14 years.
