Inky the cat Hardison, junior mascot of HardisonInk.com and Goldy the cat Hardison, senior mascot of HardisonInk.com, were both ready to pounce Friday night to select the winner who was contacted Saturday morning (Dec. 8).

Inky was the first to go toward the slips of paper, not needing a laser light to chase as inspiration, but instead just jumping right onto the small, folded pieces of papers and quickly selecting the winner by chomping on that particular slip of paper.

There are other events happening and listed on the CALENDAR PAGE, which can be reached by clicking HERE.

For instance, there is a free dinner and festive foster care informational event at Camp Anderson on Dec. 13. There is a need for foster families, especially in Dixie County.

For any person who wants to list a holiday event or any other happening for the general public to know about, please send the information in a Word document (photos sent as a JPG may be included) to hardisonink@gmail.com.

"I want to note my appreciation to all of the people who entered this contest to win tickets to see the play being directed by Diana Child," Jeff M. Hardison, publisher and editor of the daily news website said. "The Suwannee Valley Players cast and crew has included and continues to include many, many wonderful people. I want to especially note my gratitude to Dr. Becky Gill, a true patron of the performing arts."

This ticket giveaway was part of "Keeping It Great At Eight" - which notes HardisonInk.com's continuation in its eighth year of existence.

Year Nine for the daily news website starts on Feb. 1, 2019. The owner and publisher mentioned there is a potential for more contests in Year Nine, as well as potential expansion of the daily news website in 2019.
